Dedication

Originally the project was called " 66 Years Chemistry - Re-Reading" , but what was actually created over 10 years is the work that is now on the table: there were far more unpublished data than the author had assumed and the independent existence developed by some compounds was not foreseeable at the outset. Questions from and discussions with Nora and contemporary witnesses were more than helpful, especially where projects not yet finished are concerned, summarized in Achievements.

It was a wise decision to store numerous documents, papers and substance samples in Vienna during World War II and in the turmoil of the first years thereafter, later on in a bank strongbox in Hamburg as the author had been warned by the one year blockade of the Western sectors of Berlin in 1948¹. New problems arose after the new Berlin University Act came into force in 1969 which made it advisable to store further documents in Hamburg; unfortunately, the author had not included the substance samples from the years 1954 to 69².

Once again, many thanks to my wife Nora³ for everything she has given and is still giving me, also documented in a text on a " romantic dish towel" that was a gift to her many years ago.

¹ Ever since then, the author who lived in West Berlin has always maintained a West German passport (Hamburg) and an open air ticket until Germany was reunified in 1989. He farther had an agreement with the Brazilian government in Brasilia (via the embassies in Bonn/Berlin EAST and the consulate in Berlin (WEST)) that he would be able to leave for Brazil immediately, even in case of another blockade..

³ Nora governed computer engineering and knew succesfully to fight with 'it'.
